Description

Four bottles of rum were housed inside a black mahogany wood case. The first bottle of rum is a white ceramic jug with a cork stopper and text stating, "The Story of Rum Barbados is reputed to be the original home of Rum, or Rumbullion as it was originally called. Back in 1651, this account was written by a visitor: '... the Chiefe Fudling they make in the Island is Rumbullion and this is made of sugar canes distilled...strong drinks are very requisite where so much heat is, for the spirits being exhausted with much sweating. the inner parts are left cold and faint and shall need comforting and reviving.' Cokspur Fine Rum has been a favourite on the island and abroad since 1884 and has been internationally acclaimed as a high quality light-bodied rum by the awarding of Gold Medals in 1976 and 1978 in London at the prestigious International Wine & Spirit Competition of the Club Oenologique. Blended & bottled in Barbados by."
